

MULTI-ATTRIBUTE CARDS (MACs)

SCHOOL IS NOT A PLACE WHERE YOUNG PEOPLE COME TO WATCH OLDER PEOPLE WORK!

The centerpiece of the Danielson Framework for Teaching is STUDENT ENGAGEMENT--not the teacher doing all the work!!

In fact, many educators see DOMAIN 3- INSTRUCTION as the keystone to effective teaching and learning. It is no coincidence that this is often the most powerfully assessed domain in teacher effectiveness programs as well.

Multiple Attribute Cards (MACs) were designed to be a tool to create greater leverage into DOMAIN 3. They allow insight to student thinking, strengthen participation, provide assessment information and ultimately allow teachers to make responsive teacher moves based on what students are showing them. In fact many skillful teachers are using MACs to strengthen their teaching expertise in all five components of DOMAIN 3.

WHAT ARE MACs?

MACs are double-sided, laminated, printed cards with letters and numbers connected by a ring in the top right corner. (Simple right?!...but it's what you do with them that counts!)

They are designed to be used by students in all grades and all subject areas. They are durable and are best kept in a place where students can quickly and readily access them, such as a table resource basket.
